

CLASS COUNTIES SAME AS CITIES

Senator Davenport's Committee Finds Startling Disintegration and Lack of Efficiency in Rural Government and Suggests Constitutional Amendment Permitting Improvement.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Albany, Jan. 30.—Recommendation of a constitutional amendment to permit a more flexible organization of county, town, and village government so that counties may be classified the same as cities, the Joint Legislative Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment submitted its fourth annual report to the Legislature today. Senator Frederick M. Davenport, of Oneida, is chairman of the committee.

One of the features of the report is a map showing that in the last 10 years the population of most of the rural counties has been decreasing and melting into the city counties along the backbone of the state from New York to Buffalo.

"Rural life is disintegrating and county and town governments in many parts of the state are weakening along with it," the report declares. "Very little attention has been paid to the improvement of rural local government since the colonial days. Far more interest has been shown in the improvement of city government.

"Most counties, towns and villages have no budget systems, no adequate audit, no systematic purchasing, with the result that local finances are wasteful and chaotic. Assessment rolls are copied from year to year, and almost from generation to generation, without change. Collectors of taxes in some instances are found to have come to the county treasurer with handbags full of tax money with no knowledge of how much they had collected."

"County, town and village payrolls," the report says, "are frequently used as a pension system for superannuated citizens. The lack of legal training and independence of legal control have made promoters a hindrance rather than a help to crime detection. The county should guard and their work should be centralized in the office of the district attorney."

The report says the committee found some towns where it costs more than a dollar to give away a dollar for poor relief work.

Counties need an executive authority such as supervisor at large, elected by the people, the report says. It recommends that the office of sheriff in every county be placed upon a straight salary basis, and that the civil fees which have always gone to the sheriff, be turned over to the county treasury.

"It appears," the report says, "that the state has slowly developed several different kinds of counties; one like New York, where the county is all city; one like Westchester, where the county is all rural; one like Sullivan, where the county is all town; and one like Hamilton, where the county is all village."

CITY TAXES ARE DUE THURSDAY

Tax bills for the general state, county and city taxes were mailed to property owners Monday afternoon, and the collection of taxes will begin at the city's treasurer's office on Thursday, February 1.

The tax rate this year is $32.60 per $1,000 valuation, which is thirty cents less per $1,000 than last year. Taxes may be paid for thirty days without fees. Then for twenty days two per cent fees will be charged, after which there will be five per cent fees with one dollar for notice, at the end of which time the bills are turned over to the collector of unpaid taxes who adds his fees.

Cornelius Hume, formerly cashier of the Kingston National Bank, now the Kingston Trust Company, will assist at the treasurer's office during the tax collection period.

REV. MR. DENNISTON ENDS WORK IN SAUGERTIES.

The Rev. B. M. Denniston concluded his pastorate with the Methodist Church at Saugerties on Sunday, and despite the inclemency of the weather large congregations gathered to hear him.

In the evening Mr. Denniston delivered his au revoir discourse. It was not in the nature of a farewell sermon, but an exhortation to be loyal and true to the church and its work and to support the new pastor, the Rev. J. C. Coddington, who will occupy the pulpit next Sunday.

ROCKEFELLERS QUIT LEAGUE; ANDERSON TO SHOW BOOKS

John D. Rockefeller and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will not contribute to the New York Anti-Saloon League the coming year unless it is re-organized and possibly not then. This is a result of dissatisfaction with league financial methods, particularly the commissions alleged to have been involved in collection of league funds.

W. H. Anderson, superintendent of the league, against whom charges have been made by O. B. Phillips, a former league employee, notified the district attorney in New York Monday that he will produce the league's record of accounts tomorrow.

120 DAYS IN JAIL IN LIQUOR CASE

Terpening Changes Plea to Guilty But Lacks $200 to Pay Fine—Joseph Charles, War Hero, Let Off With $50 Fine—John Worff III—Weather Delays Trials.

Two pleas of guilty were made in county court Monday afternoon when county court convened to take up further criminal cases. When District Attorney Traver moved the case of The People vs. Charles D. Terpening, indicted for violation of subdivision 12 of section 1212, possessing intoxicating liquors for sale for beverage purposes, through his attorney Andrew J. Cook, Terpening changed his former plea of not guilty, to guilty of the crime charged. The court imposed a sentence slightly different in this case than in former liquor cases. Mr. Cook stated to the court that Terpening would be unable to pay a fine of $200 to the county or through failure to pay the fine serve 120 days in jail. In former cases it has been $200 or 200 days, the defendant paying the fine.

The next case on the calendar was the case of The People vs. Joseph Charles who was indicted for a violation of the highway law in driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated. Chris Flanagan appeared for Charles and said that defendant wished to withdraw his former plea of not guilty and plead guilty. The district attorney asked the court to consider the war record of the defendant in pronouncing sentence. Joseph Charles is the man who single-handedly captured a German machine gun nest and took a number of prisoners. He was awarded the D. S. C. medal for his heroic act. Judge Fowler in pronouncing sentence informed the prisoner that the war record of any man did not permit him to violate the laws of the country or give him greater privileges than any other person but in this case he would consider the record and impose a fine of $50. Charles who is a chauffeur was driving the truck of his employer some time ago. He stopped in a place and took a drink. When he came out something in the liquor caused him to want to drive the truck backwards. He did so and crashed into a Ford going in the opposite direction. However the complaining witness was not anxious to press the case and for this reason Charles was let off with the moderate fine which he paid.

In the case of The People vs. Raymond Green a settlement probably will be reached out of court. Henry McKenzie appears for defendant.

John Worff, defendant in the next case on the calendar, is ill and the case was not moved by Mr. Traver. The following three cases were moved for trial by Mr. Traver. In the case of The People vs. Freer Hyatt et al., many of the important witnesses reside in southern Ulster and on account of the severe condition of the weather it had been impossible to serve the witnesses in time for trial Monday afternoon. A similar situation in the two following cases The People vs. Charles P. Morano and The People vs. Earl Rhodes, caused court to take a recess until today. Court adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning and the jurors were excused until 2 o'clock. District Attorney Traver announced that he probably would be ready in all three cases at 2 o'clock.

COAL SITUATION SHOWS NEED OF AMERICANIZATION RIGHT AT HOME

Well-to-do Kingstonians are Ones Who Are Making it Hard to Enforce Law Designed to Protect Everybody—Help Yourself as Did Your Forefathers.

There is coal enough in Kingston to meet present needs if it is equitably distributed in small quantities and economically used. But the snow blockade, for which dealers are not responsible, and the necessity for making deliveries in small quantities, have combined to increase the work of delivery so that dealers are far behind. Delivery is further slowed up by neglect of householders to shovel paths and clean out their cellar windows.

The very poor and those who have little storage place have always been obliged to buy coal in small lots. With these the dealers have little trouble. It is a certain element of those in comfortable circumstances that dealers find unreasonable. There are people who think that the possession of a little money gives them superior right to live and it is these that are making life a burden to the coal dealers. They are used to being waited on and expect the same attention now that they received under normal conditions. They seem to think of nobody but themselves and make no effort to bear their share of the critical situation. It is for the protection of all from the rapacity and selfishness of these persons that the fuel administration rules exist and are enforced. If the rules were not enforced there would be no coal for the poorer classes.

The rules are being enforced and will be enforced. The way to meet the emergency is for those who can possibly do so to go and get the coal. There are plenty of persons who own trucks or horses who can deliver their own coal. Even a hand sled can be used by those near the coal yards. The poorer people are doing this, because they have not forgotten how to help themselves. Let the more fortunate ones follow the example of the poor, use their own wits and display a little more of the old American spirit of self reliance, and there will be coal delivered to all.

The man who has the means for helping himself and does not use them in this emergency is not a good American.

MILK POOLERS' CONTRACT UPHELD

Verdict in Holmes Cases Establishes That Cooperative Association's Contracts Are Legal, Binding and Enforceable.

The action brought by the Dairy-men's League Cooperative Association, Inc., against Merle Holmes and George Holmes and sister of Alton, Chenango county, New York, for violation of their pooling contract and which was tried before Judge Louis Martin in the Supreme Court of Ulster, N. Y., recently resulted in a jury verdict in favor of the Cooperative Association. This is the second important decision rendered in favor of the League within the last three weeks, the first one being the Barnes case decision which was handed down by Referee Merwin in the Supreme Court of Ulster on January 17th.

The Holmes case establishes the fact that the pooling contracts offered by the Cooperative Association when once signed are legal and binding and are enforceable. It is the first decision that has been made on this much discussed point and will be a source of great satisfaction to the vast army of dairymen who are working out their milk problems through an organization which has for its basis this very contract in question.

ANGELIC CHURCH PUTS OFF CHANGING PRAYERS

By Telegraph to The Freeman. London, Jan. 30.—After stormy debate, the assembly of the Church of England, today deferred action upon the proposals to revise the prayers.

A minority was in favor of saving the psalms and prayers rewritten to bring them up to date by putting more "pep" in the language. The bishop of Durham hotly denounced those who seek changes.

ALBANY'S Y. W. C. A. IS 85 PER CENT SELF SUSTAINING

Today's Knickerbocker Press says: Albany contributed $16,740.79 in the Young Women's Christian Association campaign. Enthusiasm of team captains and workers knew no bounds when the total was announced last night at the dinner, closing the drive, in the association parlors. A few more reports will come in today which probably will bring the sum up to $17,000. The quota was $15,000, or fifteen per cent of the year's budget, as the "Y. W." is eighty-five per cent self-supporting.

The industrial club girls' team obtained the largest total in subscriptions, $1,770. Miss Elizabeth Banker was captain.

HOW BRITISH FEEL ON DEBT QUESTION

By Telegraph to The Freeman. London, Jan. 30.—The bitterness aroused over the debt question was exemplified by a double column cartoon in the Pall Mall Gazette today depicting Uncle Sam standing in the door of a pawn shop. Over the picture was the caption: "I need by name and uncle by nature."

Pictures of the American flag were hissed in moving picture theatres last night.

RUHR OCCUPATION BECOMING ENDURANCE CONTEST OF WILLS

Germans Assert They Won't Give In; French Say They Will and Both Sides Act to Support Statements—Sabotage Accompanies Strike.

(By International News Service.) By Telegraph to The Freeman. Today's Rhineland developments are: French military officials in occupied areas of the Ruhr and Rhineland expelled large numbers of Germans, including many German officials. General Erich Ludendorff, formerly next to Hindenburg, the foremost military leader in Germany, predicts a stay of from one to two years by the French in the Rhineland. He says Germany cannot expect any immediate assistance from Russia, which is the "unknown quantity of Europe." General Degoutte, French commander, declares that "there is a limit to French patience and that France is determined to break the will of the German people and impose her own."

Germans forbid German residents of occupied zones to salute foreign army officers and foreign flags. The French threatened a 12-year jail term for any German selling civilian clothing to French and Belgian soldiers. Strikes continue throughout the occupied areas, although the French foreign office at Paris claims that the German rail strike is failing.

A report that twenty Germans were killed in riots at Boppard, near Essen, was officially denied by the French. Disorders and sabotage continue in various quarters. General Weygand, chief of staff to Marshal Foch, has returned to the Rhineland from Paris.

FREIGHT WRECK ON WEST SHORE

Early this morning a box car became derailed in the West Shore railroad tunnel at Haverstraw tying up traffic on both northbound and southbound tracks for several hours. The New York newspapers did not reach Kingston until this afternoon. The car left the rails in the tunnel and made it difficult for the wrecking crew to work to advantage in clearing up the wreck. At the West Shore station here it was stated that only one car had left the rails in the tunnel and that no one had been injured.

SMITH PLANS NO WET-DRY REFERENDUM

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Albany, Jan. 30.—Governor Smith has not made up his mind on the question of sending a message to the legislature calling for a referendum on liberalizing the Volstead act to permit beer and wine and repealing the Mullan-Gage state prohibition enforcement act.

"I haven't it in mind now," he said today when asked about the referendum. "It is possible for the legislature to submit any question it wants to the people by enacting a law providing the necessary machinery, but I am not now considering making any request for a referendum involving the prohibition question at this time."

Conroy, Democrat, of the 9th New York city district, and August Claessens, Socialist and former member of the assembly, would like the seat now held by Myer Alterman, Democrat, of the 17th New York city district.

DRANK WHISKEY, FORGOT GAS; BOTH ARE DEAD

By Telegraph to The Freeman. New York, Jan. 30.—Thomas Sheehan, 27, and Ellen Rooney, 29, employees of the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane, were found dead early today in a furnished rooming house. They had been asphyxiated by gas emanating from a gas stove. A bottle, partly filled with whiskey, which was found in the room, led the police to express the theory that the couple had turned on the gas but being under the influence of liquor, had forgot to light the stove.

THERMOMETERS WERE PUZZLED

Or Else Temperature Varied Greatly On John Street It Ran From 4 to 20 Below—25 Below At Gardiner.

The lowest point reached by the mercury in the tested registering thermometer at the residence of William S. Eltinge, 21 John street, during Monday night was 18 degrees below zero. The thermometer in front of Mr. Elting's drug store at 34 John street marked four below at 7 a. m., while the large spirit thermometer in front of H. J. Hoffman's cigar store, 39 John street, marked 20 degrees below at 7 o'clock. Thermometers on Fair street between John and Main street registered from 10 to 14 below zero around 7 o'clock.

In the central part of town most reports were of 8 to 10 below. The Freeman's thermometer registered 8 below, the coldest so far this winter. At the sheriff's office this morning where a number of jurors are awaiting the opening of county court, discussing the cold weather, a juror from Tilton said the thermometer there registered 18 below zero, a Gardiner man said at 6 o'clock when he left his house the thermometer registered 25 below, and a Springtown man stated that it was 24 below at the railroad flag, shanty there about 7 o'clock and that a trackman told him that the thermometer was two degrees lower than that at 6 o'clock.

From up the U. & D. railroad this morning came reports of 35 and 40 below in the mountains. Notwithstanding that it was fifteen degrees below zero on Albany avenue this morning, Judge Clearwater took his usual cold shower bath with water right from the city system and went to Albany on the first train he could get to argue a case in the Court of Appeals.

The weather will help in thickening the ice. The Knickerbocker Ice Company expect to start harvesting at Turkey Point Wednesday morning.

REV. BOEVES SPEAKS ON SOCIAL CENTRE

At the open meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs to discuss a social center for girls, the Rev. Mr. Boeve, minister of the Old First Church spoke as follows:

I still feel the handicap of being a newcomer. Like a newly elected United States Senator I feel that it is incumbent upon me to be a listener rather than an advocate. To avoid being hazed I must not disturb "senatorial dignity" with too much speaking. But I have been drafted; this was not a matter of my choosing.

"What an age for the young man!" we frequently exclaimed a few years ago. That exclamation has eliminated the words "young man" and substituted "woman."

A smiling boy of seven years listened to mother recounting the remarkable things being done by women. Telling how they organize as effectively as men, nursing the sick, ministering to the orphans, caring for the refugees. The little son was thrilled. "Mother, women are doing extraordinary things, ain't they?" "They are being everything but fathers, ain't they?"

At a banquet in my former church an eminent speaker proposed a toast to the ladies. As he lifted the glass of water he said, "Oh, woman what achievements you have made, you are the power behind the throne!" Right in front of him sat an ardent anti-suffragist who exclaimed "God Save the King!"

One of the hopeful signs of the times is the universal interest in social problems. Gone forever is the era of selfishness when the individual exists for himself alone, when he considers his own advancement, his own office, his own advantage. We now believe in the solidarity of society. Nothing is foreign to us that concerns our fellowmen. Even the secularist and mere pleasure lover who lives for today recognizes that individual happiness and progress mean social happiness and the well-being of all.

Time was when the baron in the winter's storm retreated into his castle, shut the big door, pulled down his curtains and by the light of the great fire feasted and dined, while the peasants, out in the night, starved and perished in the storm. But the old principle "everybody for himself, and the devil take the hindmost, is death struck and dying. More and more we are knitted in with the interests of our kind. The happiness of our Thanksgiving and Christmas feasts comes from the feeling that all other homes are filled with glow and joy. Social reform and social uplift is half done when we begin and it is well begun when we know exactly what we want to do.

Plato had a dream of a republic which should dispel ignorance by inculcating knowledge and wisdom. Dante thought of his beautiful city of Florence. How he looked to banish squalor and ugliness and he would find it by cultivation of the beautiful—the cathedral, the gallery, the palace—these were to regenerate society. Thomas More thought of the servitude and oppression in the city of London and he would cure all social ills by giving the people liberty and so we would have his dream of Utopia.

What cures for social and industrial ills have not been tried? We are all the time running to legislatures for new laws; emphasizing political action, decrees by statute. We want new systems of taxation, new tariff laws, greater franchise privileges, new political parties. All these represent the dreams of those who love their fellowmen who have an ambition to right all wrongs and cure all social distresses. We can never be too grateful for those who have written of the ideal commonwealth. They were the noblest spirits of the time. They were the voices for the deep, wistful, eager, passionate longings for the ideal life in an ideal city.

But while we affirm the wisdom and the beauty and function of these dreams of the Golden Age we must also confess their failure. Apart from it all the schemes of social salvation have collapsed. Now you will say that I am preaching. Well, my preaching is in harmony with the conviction of those who have thoroughly made the test. Jane Addams, of famous Hull House in Chicago, has made the confession of her regret that she had left Christ and the Christian religion out of her settlement work.

It was John Richard Green who attempted to reclaim the Whitechapel district of London by a social service from which Christ was to be excluded. After nine years he gave up in despair. By every form of institutional device, by classes, by clubs, by lectures, by culture-schemes, he sought to lift the people; but at last, broken hearted, he writes "It Is All a Failure!" Russell Wallace says that he does not know of any theory of evolution that does not require the presence of an infinite and personal God to make it workable.

As soon as we learn the truth that the weak, the hungry, the broken hearted are His children we shall have a perpetual enthusiasm and motive in all our social service.

As a Federation of Women's Clubs you have been thinking seriously recently that something must be done to help the large number of girls and young women of our city to a better realization and development of those qualities of their nature that make for the strength and winsomeness of complete womanhood. No grander object could ever be placed as a goal for united endeavor. And the thought in your mind is service. It sounds like the days of the recent great war. One of the miracles of that war was the abounding gladness of our people. There were a thousand reasons for us to be disconsolate. Think of the columns upon columns of names chronicled in our dailies—names of the dead and the wounded. It was enough to drive every sunbeam from the heart. And yet we were never doubtful.

The outlook sometimes was dark, but there was light in the land and joy in the heart that made it glorious to be alive. There was an exhilaration and exaltation of soul in our people which cannot be remembered without a thrill. The glory of the Lord seemed to shine round about us.

Explain the remarkable phenomenon? The whole American people learned the lesson of servanthood. Women of high society stood aside by side by their obscurer sisters. From the Atlantic to the Pacific women knitted day and night in the home. In the lecture hall, on the train—everywhere, even the children—were baptized in the same spirit of service. It was a rebirth of the American soul! And now again we have become a pleasure-loving people and are so prone to forget the great lesson of service. How refreshing to listen to this discussion in which you propose sacrificial service! And to find this unanimity of sentiment that it should be a Christian service and that a Christian young women's organization comes nearest to expressing your ideal for the service to be rendered.

That you think not alone of the educational, the physical, the social, but also the religious. I wish the program might include a determined effort not to wean the youth away from the home evenings but an aid to making for tidiness and attractiveness of the homes lacking in these essentials. Is it not true that discipline in the home is breaking down? Why should young girls on the streets at all hours of the night invite themselves to joy rides with men whom they have never met before? How frequently, when tragedies occur, do we read that parents did not know where the daughters were? What the Christian minister were? Is it that the whole family shall be vitally connected with the church as God has intended that it should be. That the church and the home shall be indissolubly connected; that the high ethical and moral teachings of God's word shall permeate the home, and through the home, society. We welcome and will heartily support any movement that shall assist in that great work of building character and of making life more cheerful and happy, and that shall minister to the physical, the social, the educational and the religious life.

There is no danger that we shall neglect the physical. Think of our emphasis upon the gymnasium and sports. Neither is it likely that we shall overlook the social. Think of the ingenuity taxed, the money spent in satisfying the craving for amusement. Nor is it likely that we'll forget the need of education. Look at our schools and colleges. But there is a danger that we neglect the cultivation of the moral and spiritual side of our nature. Your proposed service has in mind surrounding all the other with a wholesome moral, Christian influence. That should commend it to rich and poor alike.

There is always something. If you are riding on the train just about when you get to a place where you think you are going, you see something interesting, you pass a string of box cars a mile long. If it is an open air meeting, about the time you think the speaker is going to say something a fool passes with the cut out open. We insist, there is always something.

Legumes Demand Lime.

Legumes, since they are such a valuable part of agriculture, have a right to demand, as they do, that conditions for their growth shall be as they want them. That alfalfa and red clover, for example, insist on a fair supply of lime in the soil, is pointed out by the State Agricultural College at Ithaca.

BILLIE BROWNIE'S CALLS

"I must make some calls today," said Billie Brownie as he brushed off his best brown suit, which he saved for calling, and his finest brown stocking cap.

So Billie Brownie started off to visit the zoo. He talked to the animals and heard of those who would have gone to sleep for the winter if they had not been in the zoo.

The snakes and the bears told him they would have gone to sleep for the winter if they had not been in the zoo.

In the zoo, but that in the zoo they were fed regularly. They told him that when they were free they ate a great deal in the fall and so could go without eating for a while.

And the zoo was warm, too, which made a difference, for then they did not have to look for a warm place as they did when they were free.

And the warmest thing to do in the wintertime when free was to sleep. That was what a good many of the animals had said.

The prairie dogs told him that they slept in the wintertime whether they were in the zoo or not and that they dug holes and went down to sleep in them as soon as the cold weather came along.

Then, after Billie Brownie had visited the zoo animals he went to call on many of the fur-coated animals. He talked to those who did not mind the winter, such as the rabbits and the muskrats and the squirrels.

They told of so many things they did and they seemed surprised he hadn't noticed all their little tricks before, for they weren't trying to hide them, they told him.

Then Billie Brownie met some of the little birds who were on their way to visit Miss Springtime.

"We're going further North," they told him.

He had a word with the quiet Rusty Grackle bird family and with the Robins he had a long talk.

The Song Sparrows were on their way to prepare for the springtime and so were the Blackbirds and the Bluebirds and the Meadow Larks.

"We birds," said Mrs. Robin, "flutter our wings when we're receiving food from the Mr. Robins just as the babies do."

"So many birds were and flutter their wings just as people would jump up and down for joy or because of excitement."

"Mr. Rooster flaps his wings before he begins to crow as though he wanted to let everybody know that he was going to do something quite important."

"Oh, yes, we birds have our ways and our signs and our wings show expression just as people's faces, too, will show expression."

"But Billie Brownie," said Mrs. Robin, "you are calling almost between seasons, aren't you?"

"It's not winter and yet it's not spring."

"Yes," said Billie Brownie, "for I like to watch Old Man Winter give over the next season to Miss Springtime."

"I like to watch them do it. Sometimes they take a long time about it and they do act so amusingly."

"Old Man Winter will say to Miss Springtime: 'Oh, do take this season. I'm quite through. I really must be going.'"

"And Miss Springtime will say: 'Oh, no, Old Man Winter. I'm sure I'm in no hurry at all. Do take your time. Don't let me hurry you.'"

"That is the way they often act. Sometimes they are really in a hurry but this is usually the way they do," ended Billie Brownie as he smiled.

And Mrs. Robin looked at Billie Brownie out of her eye and then gave him a knowing wink.

"I understand, Billie Brownie. You and I understand."

A BIGGER HIT THAN "HUMORESQUE"
Story by Fannie Hurst

A PICTURE YOU MAY LIVE
IT WILL MAKE YOU LAUGH
THROUGH YOUR TEARS

"The Good Provider" is the sort of picture parents should send their children to see, post haste. When the children come back, the parents should go to find out why they made the change in the youngsters.

Whoever made the picture probably believed that the best place to hide a thing is in plain view after Edgar Allan Poe. At any rate that is where he put his moral. The moral is the picture, but the investiture is so subtle that you don't realize it until you are leaving. You are laughing through your tears and singularly impressed with the fact that the home is the foundation of our civilization. Much more deeply impressed than had you read it in H. G. Wells. Because the picture, humor and tragedy, sincerity and fool's gold, is so humanely and eminently possible you know it has actually happened. If, perhaps, it happened in your family you are properly chastised; if not you take away after you that it never shall.

The thing that makes "The Good Provider" an instead of more ruined celluloid is the manner in which the humorous and the tragic dovetail. You know yourself that life is like that, and at once you are in sympathy with the screen family. Dore Davidson, the father, never lets that sympathy to be alienated. Description of the plot, or the action, anything else is useless. You will live it when you see it.

May Now Transmit Message

ONLY ONE CHANCE IN MILLION

By Use of New Method No Code Is Necessary, for Sender and Receiver
Can Laugh at Efforts of Any Inter-loper to Listen to or Read Their Conversation—Use "Parasites" to Deceive Sharps, Making Secrecy
Double Secret.

Absolute secrecy is now possible in wireless communications. If they be made by the new system called "crypto," invented by Edouard Belin, the great French engineer, there is not another wireless operator in the world who can tune in and read them, writes Arthur Benington in the New York World. This is equally true of telegraphic or telephonic or wireless messages.

The great defect of wireless communication hitherto has been the possibility that some one—any one—other than the person for whom the message is designed can watch for it and receive it. During the war all nations became keenly aware of this essential defect, for the allies used to read the German wireless dispatches constantly and it is certain that the Germans read ours. These were, of course, sent in code, but both sides had code experts and learned very soon to read each other's codes, no matter how complex these might be.

By the use of the new method no code is necessary, for sender and receiver can laugh at the efforts of any interloper to listen to or read their conversation.

Secret in Number Lines.

Secrecy is brought about by a simple apparatus which, however, is exceedingly difficult to explain, although understandable in a few seconds when seen in operation. All is purely mechanical and automatic—that is, all but the key. This is a series of six numbers and must be remembered by both sender and receiver. These can agree upon any number they choose and can change it at will by mutual agreement. It is something like the mechanism of a bank's safe, which is set at a certain number and only those who know the number can open the door.

The use of this secrecy presupposes the employment of the Belin apparatus for sending pictures. It cannot be applied to ordinary wireless communication. In the Belin system the message to be sent is written and signed with the autograph of the sender. This is placed upon the cylinder of the portable sending apparatus and transmitted over a wire (telegraphic or telephonic) to the receiving apparatus, which may be situated anywhere within the limits of long distance telephonic conversation. Here it is automatically reproduced in exact facsimile of the original. It may be sent by wireless to an almost equal distance. Such messages have already been received at Bar Harbor (Me.) and Annapolis (Md.) from Paris and at Paris from Beirut, Syria.

It is upon the sending and receiving apparatus that the mechanism for insuring secrecy is applied. Those who have read the descriptions of the Belin apparatus will remember that the cylinder which receives the photograph must turn at precisely the same speed as the cylinder at the sending station.

This perfect synchronism is obtained automatically by making the receiving cylinder revolve a minute fraction of a second more slowly than that of the sending cylinder, and at the end of each revolution the latter stops and sends a current of the opposite character for the same minute fraction of a second, thus insuring the absolutely perfect synchronism of the starting of each revolution, while the difference of time in the ending of the revolution is so microscopically small that it in no way affects the perfection of the result.

Regulated by Chronometer.

The time of revolution is regulated at each end by the beats of an electric chronometer, just as the broadcasting of wireless time signals is regulated. The chronometers at each end must be in absolute unison.

Now the speed of each revolution must be always the same as that of all other revolutions. But it is not at all necessary that the intervals between the revolutions be exactly the same. It is necessary that each line begin exactly below the point at which the previous line began, for, if there be the slightest deviation the machine will reproduce, not letters and words, but an unintelligible jumble of dots. To understand this better it is only necessary to take a single line of writing or printing and cut it lengthwise into ribbons not more than one-third of a millimeter wide—not easy to do. I confess—and then rearrange them without care to place the beginnings of the lines over each exactly as they were. The line will be quite illegible. Therefore the lines must begin exactly at a vertical line. It does not matter at all where they finish.

It is just this synchronization of the revolutions of the cylinders, so that they shall start together at precisely the same moment, together with the possibility of varying the time elapsing between the revolutions, which M. Belin has made use of in devising what he calls his "Anti-Capturer," which literally translated, means "Anti-Capturer," that is to say, the organ which prevents interlopers from catching from the air what was not intended for them.

This anti-capturer is what regulates the periodic revolutions of the cylinders.

der. As I have said, the revolutions must never vary in speed, but the fractions of a second which are interposed between the revolutions may vary. The anti-capturer consists of six disks upon an axle, about 1-3 of a millimeter apart. Each disk has the figures from 9 to 0 upon its circumference, those on the most right hand disk signifying units; those on the next, tens, and so on, till those on the most left hand disk correspond to hundreds of thousands. The disks work together and control the speed of the cylinder by mechanism into which it is unnecessary to enter. This, however, is how the thing works:

A unit of time, say one beat of the electric chronometer, corresponding to one second of time, is selected as the desired speed of revolution.

Revolutions Are Measured.

The axle of the anti-capturer and that of the synchronizer make one revolution in the unit of time, but the axle of the cylinder makes a revolution in a small fraction of a second less than the unit of time. This, which is called the "utilized" time, leaves a fraction of a second, which is called a "lag." The lag may be between the start of the unit of time and the start of the utilized time, or it may be between the end of the utilized time and the end of the unit of time, or both.

Let us say the unit of time is one second. The cylinder revolves in two-thirds of a second, leaving one-third of each second as the lag. This one-third of a second may be distributed at will, always remembering that the two-thirds of a second used in each revolution must be used in each second. It is this distribution of the lag which the six numbered disks control.

It does not make any difference as to the length of the intervals between revolutions. These always begin simultaneously at the sending and receiving stations, this synchronism being automatically regulated by the starting of the sending cylinder. This insures the perfect alignment, without which all words would be utter confusion.

"Parasites" Added Precaution.

M. Belin, however, has provided an additional precaution against a message being caught by some clever radio sharp. He has imagined that an expert at radiotelephony might have an ear so acute as to be able to listen to the sending of a dispatch, detect the intervals and so reconstruct the message. To obviate the possibility of such wonderful detective work he makes the machine automatically send throughout the intervals what every radio sharp knows as "parasites." The effect of this would be to disconcert any listener-in, for he would hear nothing but a b-r-r-r-r-r, which would prevent him from hearing any intervals at all.

I have not attempted to describe the details of the apparatus which does these marvels. It is too intricate to explain to any but an expert; it is, however, quite simple to one who understands electrical machinery.

It is evident that the actual use of this secret apparatus must be limited; but one can readily understand conditions under which it would be invaluable. In wartime, for example, or for conversations between a nation's foreign office and its ambassadors abroad; or for a big bank and its correspondents in distant cities. Nor could an enemy or the police tap the wires or listen in under any circumstances. One European nation has already ordered the apparatus to be installed in its state department and its embassy in an important foreign capital.

This latest of Edouard Belin's inventions was hailed with respectful enthusiasm by the European press when it was prematurely announced a few weeks ago through some remarks made by Marcelin. The London Times devoted a leading editorial to it. The crypto makes practical just what every wireless expert in the world has been longing and hoping to achieve.

CHINESE EGGS FOR EUROPE

Shipments of Canned Hen Products Big Source of Commerce.

Scores of bakeries in Europe this year made their holiday cakes with eggs laid by hens in central China and shipped from Hankow, on the Yangtze river, 600 miles inland from Shanghai. The water front at Hankow for the last two months has been literally piled high with boxes of eggs destined for Europe.

China, despite frequent famines, is credited with exporting more eggs than any other country. An observer saw two big ocean-going liners, one from Liverpool and the other from London, taking on cargoes of eggs. The eggs are shelled and canned, each can holding a dozen.

The price of eggs at Hankow averages 50 cents, gold, a hundred. The coolies who carry the cargo from the warehouses to the ships receive about 20 cents a day.

His Position.

"As I was driving home from town a spell ago," related Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, "I saw Hamp Strodger come booging out of the front door of his house fully dressed, except that he didn't have his britches on."

"How in the name of wonder did he happen to be in that fix?" interestedly asked Mrs. Johnson.

"I don't know. Probably he didn't want 'em on, or hadn't time to put 'em on, or something. I never was the kind of a man to be messing into another gent's affairs. If he didn't have 'em on for any reason, that was his business. And, anyhow, I had Jig Fiddlin' in the wagon with me, and we were sorter talking hoss swap at the time."—Kansas City Star.

TRUSSED FOX IN HAY SHEAF

New Zealand Farmer Reports Occurrence Which in Many Respects
Is Remarkable.

A New Zealand farmer in Pinkerton's Plains reports the unique feat of trussing a fox in a sheaf of hay. The farmer was working his binder in a heavy crop, and was frequently in difficulties owing to the density of the cut. He therefore did not take much notice of a severe bumping and jolting of the machine, until he saw something dark pass under his feet going through the machine. The difficulty cleared itself and the binder went smoothly, but the farmer thinking over the matter, thought he had caught a rabbit, and got down to investigate. He found that the machine was all right, but on the apron were splashes of blood, which caused him to go back to some sheaves that had been thrown off the carrier. To his surprise he found a fox, securely trussed up in the hay, the binder twine encircling the sheaf. The animal had both hind legs off, one close up to the thigh, where the knives had caught it, presumably asleep in the crop.

AND HE WAS ABOUT RIGHT

Little Newsboy Certainly Had Some Correct Ideas Concerning Success in Business.

The homely, freckle-faced little newsboy had not greeted the young woman who works in one of the downtown office buildings for several days. Instead she had had to explain to a serious looking little fellow, which paper she preferred. Soon she began to realize how much the cheery smile and "How are you, miss?" had meant to her when served along with the latest edition.

Then one evening he was back at his corner and the young woman stopped to tell him how glad she was to see him again and that she hoped he was there to stay.

"Yes'm, guess I'm here to stay sure 'nough. That other one was my brother. I thought I could lend him this corner and sell papers myself at another, but the business can't run itself and he never was no business man."

The young woman smiled and said: "He is not very old, perhaps he will learn."

"Not him; he never will learn. Twice I have tried to set him up in business for himself and he can't make it go. Papers won't sell themselves. You've got to be happy if you want to sell papers. You can't be a grouch. He don't know the first thing about a good business man. He just can't smile."

The young woman demonstrated her own business ability with a smile, took her paper and hurried into the car. But she did not read the paper on her way home. She had other things to think of.

Another German Prodigy.
Germany has another memory prodigy in a twenty-one-year-old girl, who has mastered the art of brain control over muscle most completely. She sings a German song, writes an English sentence with her right hand, and a French sentence with her left hand at the same time. Also writes a sentence in one language backwards, and another in a different language in the regular way. She can calculate with one hand and write dictation backwards with the other. She can also begin a sentence at both ends and complete it in the middle, using both hands. She does several other things which really seem beyond the limit of credulity.—Scientific American.

The Stars in Their Spheres.
The sun is not unusually bright, for a star. Antares, Vega, Arcturus and Rigel, for instance, are each so bright that the noonday sun would look dull by comparison. Every star, in its cycle of life from nebula to nebula, rises in brightness to a certain intensity, then declines. The earth never was incandescent in the sense the sun is; it is too small. The sun can never hope to rival Betelgeuse, for it is the merest pinpoint beside that huge sphere.

BEST LEAGUE
OPPOSITION HERE

Tonight At Local Armory Court When Cohoes Battles With Kingston Team.

Tonight at the local armory court, an important contest is scheduled in the New York State Basketball League. The game is said to be important because its outcome will have great weight in deciding who's who in the pennant race. Albany is and has been Kingston's closest opponent and for a brief time showed the way in league standing. Cohoes, with its new squad of players, defeated the Senators two straight games. Therefore Cohoes is now the stiffest opposition in the league.

When the local representatives take the court this evening, against the Spindie City quintet, they know that they will be extended and will have to play up to their ratings. The result of tonight's contest will not change the league standing to any great extent. Kingston will lead if they win or lose with Albany following, but if Cohoes wins the only change will be that Cohoes will take third place.

Of course Kingston hasn't been beaten this season on the home court by a New York State League team and this fact alone is enough to make the Morgenweck clan put up a brilliant fight. Tonight's game, according to paper calculation, should prove a good struggle.

POUGHKEEPSIE
LEADING LEAGUE

The results of the games in the Hudson Valley Interscholastic league last week have given Poughkeepsie High School the honor of leading the league in point of games won and lost and also as to the number of points scored against their opponents. CURRENT OFFERINGS

AT THE THEATERS.

A mental tonic for disgruntled fathers is being presented at Keeley's for the last times tonight in the form of a new kind of photoplay entitled "The Good Provider." This Fannie Hurst story is a drama of praise for the head of the family, for the man who supplies, by constant hard work, the sustenance for his flock. Wednesday, "Brothers Under the Skin," a comedy for everyone who ever was, is expected to be or wants to be married. "Skin Deep" is the special for the last half of the week.

"Silver Wings," with Mary Carr, is playing at the Kingston Opera House again tonight and Wednesday. "Mother" is its theme and it is a story of a real American home. "Headin' North," and nothing except a Kansas cyclone can stop him, is the western thriller at the Auditorium tonight, also Art Acord in "Buffalo Bill."

The gorgeous wedding of Princess Mary Tudor and King Louis XII of France is one of the picturesque scenes in the picturized version of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," which had to be omitted from the stage production in 1901. The Cosmopolitan production of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," with Marion Davies in the role of Princess Mary Tudor, now showing at the Orpheum Theater, shows it in its entirety.

KID NORFOLK FIGHTS

AT ALBANY TONIGHT.

Kid Norfolk, the champ of Panama, and Wolf Larsen will stage a boxing exhibition at the Knickerbocker A. C. tonight in what Alabamians term the "battle of a century." Norfolk has fought all the men in his class and is now being primed for a bout with either Tom Gibbons or Floyd Johnson.

PLAY TONIGHT

This evening at 8:15 o'clock the Athletic Association of Kingston High School will present "All-of-a-Sudden Peggy," a light comedy in three acts. The play is a portrayal of a type of English life, the family troubles of the nobility. A serious situation in the Crackenthorpe family is caused when Mrs. O'Mara and her daughter Peggy come on a visit to the country home of Lord Crackenthorpe, and the charms of the pretty Irish girl more than attract the attention of the nobleman, much to the displeasure of the honorable mother and uncle of Anthony.

So a plan is made whereby they might rid themselves of the presence of these two, Peggy, however, has a little plan of her own, and it works in and out of its conflicts with the other make up the interesting plot of the play.
